Samsung email or gmail

Is there a real advantage to using Samsung's ecosystem when it comes to Gmail/Mail, sending messages etc? I guess if I invest in Samsung then I should trust their app correctly? Just want to know what others think when using certain Samsung phones like Note 9 if keeping in the family produces any real advantage? Your Samsung Devices 20 Page 20 comments come with a Samsung Email app that you can use to access emails from different providers such as Google or Hotmail, among other things. To use Gmail in the Samsung Email app, Samsung is required to register email client information with Google servers to verify. This information was registered a few years ago. Google recently changed their authentication policy and Samsung is required to update this client's information in the Email app. During this process, users who have provided Gmail on their Samsung phone using the Samsung Email app get notifications automatically generated from Google stating "Samsung email has been granted access to your Google account". You do not need to take any further action. You can check the permissions of your Google account. What if I cancel access and can't access my email? If you cancel access, you can no longer send, receive, or delete emails using the Samsung E-mail app because the app requires permission to access your Gmail account to do so. If you cancel access and need to return to your email account: 1. Open the Samsung E-mail app 2. You'll get prompts to sign in to your gmail account. Enter your Google password. You don't need to change your password. 3. You will then be asked to either Deny or Permit permission. Tap 'Allow' to give the Samsung Email app Access app has crossed 1 billion installations on the Google Play Store, becoming only the second application from the company after the Samsung Internet to achieve this achievement. Samsung Internet, the company's most popular first-party app, reached a score of 1 billion in February this year after crossing 500 million pairs around a year back. Although these numbers sound impressive, keep in mind that both of these apps are loaded on Galaxy devices and that account for most of these installations. Also, since Samsung distributes some of its applications through the Galaxy Store in select markets, the number of installation numbers may be much higher. Samsung emails are feature-packed email subscribers who don't get much love because most users just stick with the loaded Gmail app. Korean company email clients work well with both personal accounts and and supports features such as Exchange ActiveSync (EAS), S/MIME encryption, SPAM management, etc. It is the only option for customers who prefer email applications with the design of One Samsung UI. Despite humongous assembly numbers, Samsung's email future looks uncertain. After a recent partnership between Microsoft and Samsung, there are signs of a container's Android app the service replaced many of Samsung's first-party offers on Galaxy devices, and that applies to Korean company email applications as well. Redmond's giant Outlook App received S Pen's recent support, bringing it one step closer might replace the Samsung Email app sometime in the future. Do you use the Samsung Email app? Join a Discussion If you own a Samsung phone, you may be confused by Google emails sent today about the Samsung Email app. Users were told that the app, submitted by an unverified developer, was granted access to their Google account and authorized to read, compose, send and permanently delete any messages in their Gmail account. The good news is that Samsung is aware of this issue: it is advising its customers not to act alertly. Complaints were compiled in the Gmail Relief community throughout the day. Some reviewers responded by changing their passwords and canceling access for Samsung Emails, known as Emails on Galaxy devices, only to be left with notifications saying that apps can't access messages from registered Gmail accounts. Others questioned if the message was legitimate with a number speculating that the warning was part of a detailed falsification scheme — one person referenced the same warning occurring for the Google Wallet app. If you get a Google email about Samsung Email, check the permissions settings in your Google Account dashboard should verify that the alert is real. In almost all cases we can find, reviewers say that permissions are granted from the IP addresses of their Samsung devices. Source: Dana Taylor (left), Charlie Brown 7237 (right) More importantly, we called Samsung customer support and were told the company was aware of the issue and was working with Google to resolve it. The representative suggested that the problem might be rooted in Google enacting new security protocols. Again, we emphasize that users are encouraged to ignore such warnings. We've also contacted Google for comment and will report back if we receive it. In short, stay calm and proceed. Bonsoir ! Quelle est la différence entre l'application email et l'application Gmail? Je trouve ca strange d'ailleurs qu'ils se soient compliqué la vie avec 2 messages...! J'y comprends plus rien car quand je veux messenger un mail et que que cliques sur messenger un mail après ça me suggests Gmail ou email (mais cest quoi email ?) et la c'est 2 choose différentes.... Vous pouvez m'expliquer? Je viens d'installer Outlook qui ma l'water pass car mal car pervert avec les message pré-installées Mais maintenant ça m'en fait 3 c'est abusé ! Merci de m'éclairer! Bonsoir, La première différence c'est que l'ui viens de Google's other. Otherwise they pretty much have the same features just enough to choose the interface you prefer. You can disable these aplikasi so that there is only one left: the one of your choice Hello, gmail is is mail attached to a Google account, an email account that enables to attach a company or personal email address provided you know how to set it up, outlook is a software to access a corporate email account or window. The easiest with Android is of course gmail. Hello! They do the same: you can add gmail, views or personal accounts for both applications. Except that Gmail is part of google services (with all imagining, reading terms of use ...) and others seems to me not being samsung but only android (like a browser stock, but I can be wrong). It will lead to a really open and well-known code if that happens. Personally, I don't use either: - Gmail because it's out of the question, I don't bother to read the terms of use, I imagine easily that my emails, gmail or not, are accepted on this application through their homes and have been submitted to the reel. - Stocks because even if it does a very good job, I find it too energy-intensive with 2 accounts in push ... I use TypeMail shot ... Aquamail that I like not support IMAP on Outlook accounts ... :-/ Hello, uh ... I don't think the Gmail app allows you to access any other account type from a Gmail account. After that in his Gmail profile, you can ask Google to repatriate messages from other emails, but you can't access them directly from Gmail. As far as I know, at least. @Jojosatriani: I think all boxes that offer free messaging, microsoft (to Outlook.com) included, search for keywords on emails that go through. Don't be under any illusion ... Re: Differences in Email and Gmail applications? Hello, uh ... I don't think the Gmail app allows you to access any other account type from a Gmail account. As far as I know, at least. @Jojosatriani: I think all boxes that offer free messaging, microsoft (to Outlook.com) included, search for keywords on emails that go through. Don't be under any illusion ... If for some time it is possible to add other account types About free email, I am not an illusion, I imagine that Microsoft is equally bad (even in mind Google remains the worst in resell personal data for advertising purposes). For me google is absolute evil, Skynet tomorrow, but their products are well designed ... I didn't go without as much but it wasn't clear. That says my statement is quite different and will it get worse: when you import Outlook e-mail for example, does the Gmail app alert you that it checks your email the same way it will be done for e-mail addresses in their domain (gmail.com)? Ah OK thanks for the correction, at that time for me In terms of importing other emails, there are no warnings, but you have to go read Google TOS in detail. They certainly didn't leave that for coincidence, they had enough lawyers for it. This is certainly understandable in terms of, although often in inevitable language. Thanks for your answer! :super: I understand the difference otherwise I confirm that Gmail supports other accounts because I put my address live.fr (managed by theirs now) on this one. So, I love Gmail and its color contacts in mailboxes etc... So I've put it in a widget BUT: I made another post exactly that I'm going to tell you, I realized that when I sent an email from this one and well this one was always send by 2 (and sometimes I even saw 3 times!) you have an explanation? So I downloaded Outlook and there it was only sent once but hey it bothered me because I liked my Gmail widget because outlook mailboxes automatically put a quick filter that you need to uncheck to see the whole mailbox ... grrrr and then the Outlook widget isn't as easy as Gmail in the sense that you can't have your inbox threaded. Thanks for ennching me! :frime1: :frime1:
